Opening of New Fall And Winter Goods....

New Silks and Dress Goods.

Roman Persian Taffetas and Satin Striped Dresden Taffetas are among this season's sweetest Waist Silks.

Chenille Taffetas—black chenille cords on colors—grand Silks, either for waists or dress trimmings.

Raised Cord Taffetas are not as expensive. Come in all the new solid colorings.

Blocked Ombre Stripes are strikingly different from any Silks heretofore produced.

25 fall shades in finest Taffetas, 85c yard.

Many of the new Fall Dress Goods combine double features—different weaves and colorings on the two sides, but all of them finished to wear either way.

Double-faced Gilt Suitings and Cloakings—plain on one side, plaid on the other.

Double-faced Cheviots, Venetians, Camel's Hair, Homespuns, etc.

Handsome new Black Crepons and Velonons.

Beautiful Taffeta, Satin and Chiffon All-Over's.

New Suits and Waists.

Striking individuality in all of them. How do you like this Suit?

Made of grey Camel's Hair Cheviot, full taffeta lined; double-breasted tight-fitting jacket, a trifle shorter than last season. The new "Habit" Skirt of this Suit has a perfectly plain back, but it flares out to a fullness equal to last season's. The unusual feature of this skirt is an extension seam at side, which extends into a generous fly vent—no pleats in either jacket or skirt.

Dozens of New Silk Waists

here. One style made of new violet corded and tucked taffeta, with full yoke and stock of pure white tucked and open braid stitched taffeta. Attached to bottom of yoke at front and back are divided white taffeta silk flaps, covered with black silk bow knots—flaring cuffs to correspond.

This store recently bought the entire Sample-Lingaman Co.'s stock of goods, and you can still buy what is left at about One-Half the regular prices.

DR. HAZELETT DEAD.

One of Wheeling's old and Respected Citizens Passes Away.

PROMINENT IN HIS PROFESSION

And in Business Enterprises—His Illness Lasted Several Weeks and the Sad Outcome was not Unexpected—Sketch of the Career of a man Whose Influence in This Community was not Inconsiderable.

Dr. Robert W. Hazlett, one of the oldest and best known physicians of Wheeling, and a most respected citizen, died at his home, No. 921 Main street, Saturday night, about 11 o'clock, in the seventy-second year of his age. His death was due to pernicious anaemia—impoverishment of the blood—and it came after an illness of several weeks. Genuine regret was felt at the announcement of Dr. Hazlett's death, for no man commanded a more general esteem in the community for his many noble qualities. He was a citizen of the best type. His life was replete with honor, usefulness and gentleness, and his passing away will leave a mournful gap. In the practice of his profession, in financial life, and in any movement to advance the city's interests, Dr. Hazlett was at the fore.

At his death Dr. Hazlett was one of the directors of the National Bank of West Virginia, and occupied a like office in the Wheeling & Belmont Bridge Company. His wife was Miss Mary Hobbs, daughter of the late John L. Hobbs, a pioneer glass manufacturer of Wheeling. Surviving him are his widow and five children. The sons are Howard Hazlett, real estate and stock broker; Samuel Hazlett, assistant cashier of the People's Bank; Edward Hazlett, iron broker; Robert Hazlett, county engineer. The daughter is Miss Kate Hazlett.

The following is a biographical sketch of Dr. Hazlett, which appeared in the Pandora, the Washington and Jefferson College annual, written by Dr. Jepson, of this city:

Robert W. Hazlett was born at Washington, Pa., April 26, 1828. He was the son of Sarah and Samuel Hazlett, and came from a highly esteemed family. The doctor was educated at Washington college, but was prevented from graduating with the class by illness. Later, however, he was given the honorary degree of A. M. by the trustees of the college. He was, in early life, quite an artist, and prepared many illustrations and specimens for the medical lectures of Dr. King. His ability was at once recognized, and it was at that time that he decided to take up medical studies.

Dr. Hazlett read medicine under Drs. Clemans and Cummins, of Wheeling, and his studies progressed rapidly; until he was graduated from Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in the spring of 1851. In the winter of 1851-2 he took a post graduate course, and later located in Wheeling, practicing medicine until 1857-58, when his health began to fail, and he found that it was imperative that he absent himself from his duties for a short time. He sought rest and health, and made a geological examination of the coal fields of certain counties east of the Appalachian range.

While thus engaged in work that rapidly brought back health and strength, Dr. Hazlett located and had supervision of the work of drilling the first oil well in Virginia—now West Virginia. The strike which followed caused excitement throughout the United States. The doctor also found a peculiar stratum of coal in Ritchie county, which attracted much attention.

After the outbreak of the civil war Dr. Hazlett entered the service as a surgeon of the Second regiment of Virginia volunteers, to which he was commissioned in June, 1861. He served until the fall of 1862 when he was appointed brigade surgeon of Latham's independent brigade. In 1863 he resigned his commission, and was appointed one of the surgeons of the United States general hospital at Grafton, W. Va. Later he was commissioned by the secretary of war surgeon of the board of enrollment of the First district of West Virginia. Dr. Hazlett saw much fighting, and participated in his army career in the engagements of Monterey, McDowell, Cross Keys, Cedar Mountain, Waterloo, White Sulphur Springs, Warrenton, Freeman's Ford, Second Bull Run, Centerville and Chantilly.

At the close of the war Dr. Hazlett resumed the practice of medicine in Wheeling. He was very successful. He served as president of the city and of the county medical societies, was health officer of the town of South Wheeling, and for over twenty years was an United States examining surgeon for pensions. He twice declined the nomination for the presidency of the state medical society, but in 1893 he was unanimously elected to that office, and presided at the meeting of that year at Berkeley Springs. He served in the city council and as a member of the board of education and at the time of his death was a member of the chamber of commerce.

The funeral will occur Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock from the family home, No. 921 Main street. The interment will be at Mount Wood.

The Ohio County Medical Society has been called to meet this evening at 8 o'clock in the rooms of the board of education, Hub building, when appropriate action will be taken on Dr. Hazlett's death. Members of the medical profession not affiliated with the society are also invited.
